

Description and information for SFU Creative Works Textbook Data 2011-2012

File CreativeWorks-Textbooks_2011-2012a.csv

All datasets for Data for Assessing the use of CanLit in teaching at Simon Fraser University are available at <https://summit.sfu.ca/item/38644>

This set provides overview data for the purchase of course textbooks by the Simon Fraser University Bookstore for the Fall semester 2011 and the Fall Semester 2012.

The following data is provided:

Total number of courses ordering textbooks from the Bookstore

Total number of items ordered

Number of courses using creative works

Courses using creative works as a percentage of total number of courses ordering textbooks

Number of creative items

Creative items as a percentage of total items

Number of courses using Canadian creative works

Courses using Canadian creative works as a percentage of total number of courses ordering textbooks

Number of Canadian creative items

Canadian creative items as a percentage of total items

Canadian creative items as a percentage of creative items

Departments using creative works

Departments using Canadian creative works

The following is how the researchers defined “creative works” and “Canadian creative works” for the purposes of this project.

1. Creative works are defined as novels, plays, short stories, poetry, and collections/anthologies of any of these.
2. Canadian creative works are defined as creative works which were written by
  1. Someone who was born in Canada who may or may not still live in Canada, but is generally known or referred to as a “Canadian author,”
  2. Someone who was born elsewhere but later lived in Canada and is known for writing during this time, or is generally known or referred to as a “Canadian author,” or
  3. Anyone generally referred to as a “Canadian author” (e.g., on Wikipedia or a publisher’s website).
  4. Canadian creative literary works includes all creative works published by members of the Association of Canadian Publishers (listed here).
  5. In the case of anthologies and collections, a Canadian creative work is a collection
    1. Marketed as Canadian,
    2. Published by a member of the Association of Canadian Publishers, and/or
    3. Consisting primarily (i.e., 50% + 1) of Canadian creative works.

Academic department and course abbreviations used in dataset:

DIAL = Semester in Dialogue

EBP =

ECON = Economics

EDUC = Education

ENGL = English

EXPL =

FPA = Fine Arts / School for the Contemporary Arts

FREN = French

HIST = History

HUM = Humanities

LS = Labour Studies

PHIL = Philosophy

SA = Sociology and Anthropology

SG =

WL = World Literature

NOTE: The number in parentheses beside the department abbreviation in the dataset represents the number of creative works, or Canadian creative works, used by that academic department.

Acknowledgement:

The researchers are grateful for the assistance of the SFU Bookstore, SFU Library Access Services, SFU Institutional Research and Planning, and MLIS co-op students Caprice, Rebecca, Samantha G., Samantha S., and Tomi for their valuable assistance in the assembling and computation of the data.