

The UNBC Women & Gender Studies Program is proud to present:

Meredith Kimball

Professor of Women's Studies and Psychology
Women's Studies Department
Simon Fraser University

An Historical Reconstruction of Recovered Memory Debate:

In 1986 Freud proposed his seduction theory in which he argued that hysteria was caused by childhood sexual abuse. He soon abandoned this theory focusing instead on childhood sexual fantasies. Dr. Kimball examines both Freud's theory and retraction as well as the history of thinking about the relationship between childhood trauma and adult mental illness.
