

WOMEN'S STUDIES LECTURE

Islamization & Women's Economic Role: The Case of Iran

by

Dr. Roksana Bahramitash

Dr. Bahramitash holds a Postdoctoral Fellowship in the Dept. of Women' Studies as part of the major research project, Neo-Liberal Globalism and its Challenges: Sustainability in the Semi-periphery.

Dr. Bahramitash received her doctorate in sociology from McGill University. Her research interests include: globalization and the gender gap in developing countries; the female labour market structure in developing countries; the economic position of women under Muslim law; political mobilization of women and its impact on environmental policy; gender, ethnicity and religion as criteria for assessing development projects; and micro-credit institutions and their effect on female economic empowerment.

2001

Friday, September 28th, 2:30-4:00 in AQ 5051